

When we play woodwind instruments, we produce sound by blowing air across a mouth hole or a reed into a tube with holes in it.

Just like my recorder

On woodwind instruments, you can play notes in two ways: On the recorder, you cover and uncover the holes in the tube with your fingers. On the other instruments on this page, you use keys.

Listen to the sound of these instruments. Some are high and some are low. Do you know why?
